The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) provides students with certain rights concerning the privacy of, and access to, their education records. A student’s education record cannot be disclosed to a third party, including the student’s parent or guardian, without the student’s written consent, or unless an exception applies.

FERPA permits the release of “Directory Information” without student consent. North Carolina Central University has designated the following categories of personally identifiable information about students as Directory Information that may be disclosed without consent: Name, local address and phone number, permanent address, date and place of birth, photograph or likeness, college, curriculum, enrollment status, classification, date of attendance at NCCU, awards and academic honors, degrees and dates awarded, most recent previous educational institutions attended, participation in officially recognized activities and sports, and height and weight of athletes.

FERPA allows students the right to withhold the disclosure of Directory Information. Students should carefully consider the consequences of the decision to withhold Directory Information, as any future requests for such information will be refused (including any requests for information after a student has graduated and left the university). For example, if a student has a directory hold on his or her account, NCCU will not be able to verify the student’s degree to potential employers without the student’s express consent. NCCU will honor the student’s request to prevent the disclosure of Directory Information but cannot assume responsibility to contact the student for subsequent permission to release it. Regardless of the effect upon the student, NCCU assumes no liability for honoring a student’s instructions that such or other information be withheld.

For more information regarding FERPA, please see NCCU’s Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act Regulation located here: <https://www.nccu.edu/policies/retrieve/46>.
