Chancellor also extended sincere condolences to Trustee Cornell Slade on the passing of his brother, Mr. William (Bill) Slade, earlier this month. We will be keeping you in our thoughts and prayers during this difficult time.

Sadly, we have another Fallen Eagle at the university. Dr. Johnathan Brian Horton, assistant professor in the Department of Music, and director of NCCU’s Jazz Studies program and Jazz Ensemble, passed away on September 14, 2022. The funeral services are taking place today in Kinston, NC, and a busload of Dr. Horton’s colleagues and students have made the trip to fellowship with his family. We will keep Dr. Horton’s loved ones in our thoughts and prayers.

FALL OPENING

The Fall 2022 semester has opened. We are now in week 7. Students are back to campus in full force. We have a campus housing rate of 96%, compared to ~60% in some prior years.

There are no major issues with COVID-19 thus far and the students seem to be comfortable. We continue to offer COVID testing, and have expanded our capabilities to be able to offer Monkeypox information, testing and vaccination on campus. Other ways we are supporting students’ wellbeing is through the expansion of mental health initiatives. Two examples are our contracting with Care.com to provide mindfulness and meditation services and launching TAO digital self-help and therapy.
ENROLLMENT

Enrollment details are shared in your pre-reading. There is a persistent decline in high school graduates, both in NC and across the nation. We are working with the UNC System to remove the out-of-state cap on new students. We are also intensifying our efforts to implement new, muscular strategies to recruit in-state students.

The Graduate Studies enrollment process needs some review and improvement in execution.

RESEARCH

Our research enterprise continues to thrive. Since our previous meeting, the university has been awarded over $17.4 million in funding. We have already received more than 40 awards year-to-date thanks to our prolific grant writers.

BRITE was awarded $6.2 million from President Biden’s Build Back Better Regional Challenge. These funds will be used to establish workforce training hubs at five NC HBCUs and UNC – Pembroke, promoting workforce equity for biomanufacturing.

Our TRIO programs provide students with tangible opportunities and accommodations to take full advantage of our Eagle Promise.

Some of the new and renewed TRIO Program grants received year-to-date include:

- Renewal of Ronald E. McNair Grant (August 2022, $1,309,440)
- Bound Program Grant - Graham High School (September 2022, $1,437,685)
- Upward Bound Program Grant - Person High School (September 2022, $1,437,685)

ATHLETICS

We are doing well under our new Athletics Director, Dr. Skip Perkins. He has been on the job and we are seeing great progress.

Our student-athletes are winning both on the field and in the classroom. Not only are we off to a 4-0 start with our football team, we have also won the MEAC award – including $10k – for the highest academic progress rate.

Fundraising activity in the department is on the rise, including several major gifts of $10K and above.

Dr. Perkins has also initiated renovations of the Athletics facilities, including the new scoreboard at the stadium.
ADVANCEMENT

Today is Dr. Gia Soublet’s last day with us at NCCU. We are grateful for her service and leadership of the Division of Institutional Advancement. She realigned her unit and ushered in a new culture of philanthropy at the university. Her strategic plan was submitted to the Board for review and adoption.

ADMINISTRATION AND FINANCE

The new School of Business building at the intersection of Alston Avenue and Lawson Street will have beneficial occupancy in the spring, with student programming beginning in Fall 2023.

Renovations have started on the Lee Biology Building, Taylor Education Building and the WNCU Radio Station.

Construction on the 24-7 Collaborative Learning and Research facility – designated exclusively for student use – will begin soon on the corner of Fayetteville and Lawson Streets.

FIVE YEARS IN REVIEW

NCCU has finished a comprehensive five-year review of our results of implementing our Strategic Plan and Strategic Priorities. This review is contained in a new publication pictured here, “The Eagle Promise Realized.” An online version is currently available, and you will have printed copies on hand at our next meeting, during which we will review the major accomplishments.

STUDENT SPOTLIGHT

Mr. Torrance Harrell is an MBA student pursuing the new Real Estate specialization at our School of Business. Interned with Dell Technologies’ Corporate Real Estate Team. In his own words, “I participated in the optimizing of Dell’s $7trillion + real estate portfolio, which allowed me the opportunity to contribute to lease terminations, property sales, workplace experience enhancement and the development & re-development activities that Dell has currently undertaken.”

Mr. Harrell continues, “The greatest take away from the internship was the realization of how important my life and professional experiences are to the changing real estate climate, [developing] an increased appetite for learning how to value properties, and completing a development project that required creativity, teamwork, and technical knowledge. My biggest accomplishment was developing a plan for a Convention Center on Dell’s main campus that included community connection spaces, opportunity to connect with Dell’s technical development, and an opportunity for Dell employees to come together in-person for company events. Through research, he was able to present an opportunity for Dell to build the facility using outside funding.”
